LLOYD GEORGE FOR REPAYMENT OF ALL WAR DEBTS

In Address to Coalitionists Declares He Is For League of Nations With U. S. and Great European Nations.

"AMERICA AND GREAT BRITAIN MUST WORK TOGETHER" SAYS

By Associated Press
LONDON, Oct. 25.—Former Prime Minister David Lloyd George, addressing an enthusiastic meeting of coalition liberal members of Parliament today, declared that in the coming elections the interest of the country must come first. In part of his speech he made the declaration, "Great Britain must pay America all of her debts. I am for a league of nations, but until you get the United States and the great nations of Europe as well as the small, the league will be crippled and cannot serve its full purpose. America and Great Britain must work together," he said. "We should not attempt to impose upon Germany any payments which are beyond her capacity. I am strongly in favor of renewal of the pact with Russia," he said.

YEAR'S ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF WOMAN'S CLUB OUTLINED

The three chief accomplishments of the Middlesboro Woman's Club in the year just past, according to the report of Mrs. J. T. Alderson at the convention Monday, were, co-operation with the Red Cross in its health work, raising funds for the Grace Nettleton Orphan Girls' Home, and the support of the Carnegie Library.

The members of the club assisted in the annual Red Cross roll call, in which 291 members were enrolled, they helped raise $3500 for the county health unit in this community, and they assisted the Kiwanis Club in putting over the $150,000 school bond issue. Last Christmas, working with the Kiwanis Club, they raised $1128 for the Grace Nettleton Home at Harrogate.

The library committee of the Woman's Club has directed all of the work of the library since it was opened less than three years ago, and has financed it entirely except for the appropriation since January of $60 a month by the city for that purpose. The library has over 4000 books and over $800 has been spent on the purchase of books alone.

The history department of the club brought Mrs. Lafayette of Lexington here last spring and subscribed to the student loan fund.

L. M. U. INSTITUTES MUSIC FESTIVAL

Harrogate, Tenn., Oct. 25.—An annual fall festival of music was instituted at Lincoln Memorial University Sunday at a gathering on the University campus of the choir and singing was planned by Prof. J. W. Denny, of leaders of the county. The meeting of the Music Department of Lincoln Memorial University, and the leaders and singers representing the various choirs of the county entered actively into the service.

Complete choirs came from Head of Barren, Lonegown Valley, Cumberland Gap, and Mount Gilead. Individual singers came from nearly all the groups in the county, and of the leaders present who led in the singing were J. H. Minton of New Tazewell, president of the Claiborne County Singing Convention, Thomas Sandafor of Lonesome Valley, I. E. Meyers, of Combs, John Sandafor of Mount Gilead, and John Moore of Head of Barren. The Head of Barren quartette sang one number, and Milt Russell and John Moore sang a duet. Walnut Hills choir of Gibson's Station, Virginia, also sang a beautiful number. Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the occasion was the remarkable singing of the Mount Gilead Choir, which was out in a body and was led by John Sandafor.

Another feature of the meeting was the little group of people who sang several numbers from the Old Christian Harmony, in minor music. The quaintness of this singing charmed the audience, and many of the students of the University were heard to remark "this makes me think of home."

Another special number on the program which was highly enjoyed was a beautiful solo by Mrs. J. W. Denny.

Before the close of the afternoon session, two songs were sung by the children of the Grace Nettleton Home and after a brief talk by Mr. James Kilgion of Cumberland Gap, the audience made up $50 for the support of the home, and pledged several wagon loads of provisions.

Garland's Own Story Of What He is Doing

By Josephine Van de Crift Middleboro, Mass., Oct. 25.—What is Charles Garland doing at?

What is his philosophy of life, of marriage, of right and wrong, of labor and wealth?

Garland has answered these questions for the first time. The man who gave away his fortune to be used in public service, and now lives on his run down farm near here, gave this authorized statement:

I am 23 years old. When I was 20 I entered Harvard. I went to college as a matter of course with no definite idea as to what my future was to be.

But some time during the year I started reading Tolstoy and Plato and was surprised to find out how much more Plato knew than the people who were trying to teach me.

At the end of the first year I left college determined to evolve my own standards and to live by them. All that has happened since has been the result of that determination.

I do not pretend that those standards are perfect. I have merely attempted to work out my own problem to my own satisfaction.

I have been asked if it is my purpose to establish a colony of people whose ideals are similar to my own. No such idea has seemed practical to me this far.

My 30 acres of farm here are run down. I am trying to bring them to a supporting basis. In the meantime I am using as much of my income as I need. The major portion of it I am devoting to the American Fund for Public Service, because I believe that all wealth should be used for social purposes.

I have no wish to fasten my ideas upon anyone else. Each individual should work out his own salvation according to the best of his ability.

The individual should be less subservient to outside authority. The whole idea of right and wrong is based on the mistaken assumption that some one person knows what right is. Education is not a matter of teaching children alone. Growups can learn as much from children as children can from growups. We should have more reverence for children. I

Boys Find Buried Treasure In Hills Near Barbourville

PINEVILLE, Oct. 25.—While playing near their home at Carpenter, Whitley county, 13 miles from Barbourville, three lads, sons of Joe Harris, found forty Mexican pesos. The coins bore the date 1833. They bear evidence of their long sojourn under the rocks of Mother Earth, each one being more or less corroded, which makes the figures and words difficult of identification. They are honest-to-goodness Greater pesos, however.

According to D. D. Faulkner, on whose farm the coins were found several days ago, the children who were playing about the place, turned up a large stone and found their fine treasure lying in a small cavity in the ground. Picking up one of the pesos they ran to their home, showed their find to Mr. Harris, and later the treasure hunters returned, bringing with them the forty coins.

While of course, there is not much value in the money, except for its demand by coin collectors, the story of its discovery has started no little amount of talk among the older citizens of the community. Tradition has it that Swift, one of the first settlers of Kentucky and a man who was reputed to be uncommonly wealthy for his time, got in bad with the Indians, with the result that he and his family had to flee for their lives. This pioneer, it is believed, had a rich silver mine near what is now Whitley county, and coined money as a sort of pastime. When the Red Men camped in his trail, he had thousands of dollars in do not feel that I own my children.

Marriage is all right for those who believe in it. The only thing that makes marriage sacred is love. Love is the only bond to marriage. If love has ceased marriage becomes what it was in the beginning, merely an outward symbol.

If a man and a woman differ on certain things then they should each determine what is best for both. Whatever reports there have been to the contrary, Mrs. Garland and I are still friends. We are trying to do what is best for both of us.

I started farming because I felt the need of doing productive work. Everybody should do constructive work of some kind. If each of us had in mind the thing of useful work rather than the making of money, there would be a much better distribution of labor. Charles Garland's philosophy of life is expressed in his own words in this poem:

Friend, do you ask
Why I questioned old standards,
Called some unsetting for me,
Accepted some, rejected some?
I did it to be more truly myself
And that I might more truly love
you,
For whoever is most himself
Is most the friend of man.

FRANCS AT LOW RECORD ON MARKET

Quoted at 7.5 Cents—Par Value of Money is 19.3 Cents.

By Associated Press
NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—French francs were quoted on this market today at 7.5 cents each, the new low record for the year. The par value of the franc is 19.3. One explanation is that the British are buying dollars with francs to pay interest on the American war debt.

subjected to several chemical tests to determine what metal or metals, the coins are made of. Those present at the test agreed that silver made up the largest part of it, but that there was some other metal alloyed with it to withstand the attack of nitric, sulphuric and hydrochloric acids. Neither of the three acids removed the corrosion from the coin, but nitric seemed to act upon the alloy in the metal. There is nothing authentic in the stories told, which were in turn handed down from father to son through several generations, but it makes an interesting conversation for those who were raised in Whitley county, and anyone who can throw any light on this seeming mystery, is asked to communicate with D. D. Faulkner at Pineville.

In the meantime, the Republica Mexicana is without several of its coins and goodness knows, she needs them bad enough.

TOO FAT? DON'T STARVE YOURSELF; PROPER CLOTHES WILL REDUCE YOU

By Marian Hale

There are two ways to get rid of your superfluous flesh, diet it off or dress it off. Calories or crinolines, take your choice.

If the spirit of the early Christian martyrs is not entirely corrupted within you, you can get surprising results, with the first method.

If you can't bear to make others unhappy seeing you exist on spinach when they know your inner longings you may profitably try the latter. It's surprising how many women are doing it successfully.

Figures may not lie, but the right sort of clothes will, says Harry Collins, the fashionable New York costume designer, to whose palace on Park avenue come women like Mrs. Harding who want clothes of quiet elegance or the most extreme dresses of the New York social and theatrical sets.

Men are realists about the clothes. They accept themselves as they are. Women are idealists. No woman ever wants to look as she actually is, but as she would like to be. The successful dressmaker appeals to a woman's ideals as well as her husband's wallet.

At least 85 per cent of the women of this country believe they are overweight. Only about 40 per cent of them really are.

So 40 per cent must be made to look lighter than they really are and the other 45 must be made to look as slim as they would like to be. The remaining 15 per cent must be made to look curved.

As I watched the slim, graceful mannequins that parade about the show rooms like lovely peacocks it occurred to me they must really be slim there could be no illusion about them.

They are the size the average woman would like to be," Collins said, reading my thoughts. "When a woman buys a gown for her first impression of it is of her ideal self, the tall slender, floating creature that dwells in her mind.

In the days of the tight fitted frock there was not much chance to do anything for the overweight woman. Today there are all sorts of style devices and tricks that will subtract flesh from any particular part of the body where it seems desirable to eliminate it.

Drapery, skillfully manipulated, will conceal bad lines or emphasize good ones. Loose panels add height and take away width. Uneven hem lines and longer skirts will reveal lovely ankles or artfully conceal those not beautiful.

"Side panels apparently reduce any hip line, and the present style of blouse makes it possible for nearly any woman to appear a perfect 36."

TODAY'S RECIPES

COOKIES

By Bertha E. Shapleigh of Columbia University

The following is a very good foundation recipe for a rich, crisp cookie. If cut with a medium sized cutter, having the dough rolled as thinly as possible without breaking, the recipe will make 60 or more cookies.

- 1 cup butter
  - 2 cups sugar
  - 3 eggs
  - 1 tablespoon milk
  - 1-4 teaspoon soda
  - 4 cups flour
- Cream the butter and sugar together until light. Add eggs unbeaten, one at a time, beating well with the addition of each egg.
- Add soda dissolved in milk. Add flour, thoroughly mix and place in a cold place for several hours.
- Take out a small amount of the dough at a time, roll, cut and bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. When finished cookies should be a golden brown.

Nutmeg or cinnamon may be put in when mixed, but a very good way is to mix the spice with sugar and then sprinkle over the top before baking.

Battle Between Coats and Capes Ends in a Truce

The case of capes vs. coats has been settled satisfactorily for both factions. Capes win! Coats win! Other seasons' fashions have refused to be divided. It must be one of the other. This season both are to be worn. The coat pictured blouses at the waist and droops from the shoulders wrapfully, but that is due to the very new style sleeve.

Collars this winter are high, more for smartness than for warmth. Yet fashion is to be thanked for combining the two.

For those who like the comfortable voluminous folds of a cape there is a style illustrated. Panel-like trimmings are the real reason for its very popular and fashionable existence.

Jack Opens His Fight on Cousins

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JACK DURYEA (on a honeymoon in Europe with his bride, EDNA, on a secret mission to investigate the suspected duplicity of his firm's European manager, A. Naples Pack believes he finds proof of Cousin's double-dealing.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Yes, we're getting each other's number, old Cousin and I," Jack repeated grimly. "Question is, shall we come out any say so, or keep on pretending to be all silk?"

"Stave off war as long as you can," suggested Edna nervously. "I can see our honeymoon being spoiled completely."

"War's on," said Jack with narrowed eyes, not hearing the last part of Edna's sentence. "He's waging it from ambush, but I'll study him before firing."

Meantime they began the trip to Capri, Anagni, Pompeii and Vesuvius that Cousins had planned. And it was a queer tour, Jack and Cousins were watching each other like primitive animals as they moved stealthily about, Edna wholly enraptured by what she saw, Capri, the mountain island with its southern loveliness of nature, its crumbling castles, its legends of Tiberius, its thousand winding walks, its perpendicular vineyards and its famed Blue Grotto, the cave into which you shoot, lying flat in your rowboat so as not to strike the low arch of the entrance and where inside everything is bathed in a light of silver and blue of such unearthly beauty as only dreams could approach.

At Anagni the three stopped at what was once a Franciscan monastery, now a luxurious modern hotel halfway up a mountain overlooking the Blue Mediterranean. Here, Jack seated in a long, pillared vine-wreathed pergola, tried to talk business with Cousins.

The European manager in black and gown appeared to Edna.

"Please, please stop him, madame! Here are all the beauties of southern Italy, the full moon, your honeymoon, dear madame, and he wants to bury his nose in a sales report. It is terrible!"

It had more effect than Jack realized. Edna, thrilled with the levelness that had played on the strings of poets for a thousand years, half laughingly joined Cousin in his protest.

"Really, Jackie, I do think we should forget business for a minute. Just look."

Jack nodded assent and joined in their pleasure. But privately he did some telegraphing to a friend in Rome. Then he was more content to wait.

They went on to Pompeii and for the first time in her life Edna looked into kitchens and living rooms and shops and gardens in which nearly 1900 years ago people like themselves in the midst of everyday life were suddenly buried in a downpour of hot ashes and molten rock. She turned to Jack, emotion surging through her.

But Jack nodded absently and a sick disappointment clutched at Edna's heart. She saw he was trying to make his thoughts follow hers but that they were really busy on electrical contracts and inflated expense accounts. The rest of her day was then clouded with resentment. Few words passed between them as they later laboriously climbed the slope of Mount Vesuvius, the ever-brooding menace of the region.

Edna felt as if some onlookers were were brooding over her honeymoon happiness. But she did not expect its eruption to come so soon.

The Flaming Jewel

By Robert W. Chambers

Copyright 1922 by George H. Doran Company

BEGIN HERE TODAY

For the third time that day, beautiful EYE STRAYDER faced death as an innocent victim in the battle for possession of the priceless gem, the Flaming Jewel.

First stolen from the refugee COUNTESS OF ESTHONIA by the great international thief,

QUINTANA, and then stolen from Quintana by MIKE CLINCH, who hoarded it in his disreputable hunting camp in the Adirondacks as the sole means of giving his beloved Eve the education of a lady, the jewel was now in Eve's possession.

Facing her was Quintana and his gang. A prisoner with her was STATE TROOPER STORMONT, the man she loved.

In the surrounding forest, Clinch and his men were man-hunting savagely intent on killing Quintana and his gang. Under the window JAMES DARRAGH, under the name of HAL SMITH had learned Clinch's friendship, but whose secret intent was to restore the gem to the beguiled countess. Smith had just killed SALZAR, one of Quintana's men, in a fight and now, dressed in Salzar's clothes, awaited an opportunity to aid Eve and Stormont.

On With The Story

CHAPTER IV

Outside in the rag-weed patch, Hal Smith rose stole across the grass to the kitchen door and slipped inside.

"Now, senorita," said Quintana very gallily, "my packet if you please, and we leave you to the caresses of your faithful gendarme, who should thank God that he still possesses two good hands to fondle you! Alons! C me then! My packet!"

One of the masked men said: "Take her downstairs and lock her up somewhere or she'll shoot us from the window."

"Lead out that gendarme, too!" added Quintana grasping Eve, by the arm.

Down the stairs tramped the men forcing their prisoners with them.

In the big kitchen the glare from the burning out-house fell dimly: the place was full of shadows.

"Now," said Quintana, "I take my property and my leave. Where is the packet hidden?"

She stood for a moment with her head drooping, amid the somber shadows, then, slowly, she drew the emblazoned morocco case from her pocket.

What followed occurred in the twinkling of an eye; for, as Quintana extended his arm to grasp the case, a hand snatched it, a masked figure then sprang through the doorway, and ran toward the barn.

Somebody recognized the hat and red bandanna:

"Salzar!" he yelled. "Nick Salzar!"

"A traitor, by God!" shouted Quintana. Even before he had reached the door, his pistol flashed twice, deafening all in the semi-darkness, choking them with stifling fumes.

A masked man turned on Stormont, forcing him back into the pantry at pistol-point. Another man pushed Eve after him, slammed the pantry door and bolted it.

Through the iron bars of the pantry window, Stormont saw a man wearing a red bandanna tied under his eyes, run up and untie his horse and fling himself astride, under a shower of bullets.

As he wheeled the horse and swung him into the clearing toward the foot of star pond, his seat and horsemanship were not to be mistaken.

He was gone now, the gallop was stretching into a dead run; and then Quintana's men still following, shouting, hallooing in the starlight like a pack of leaping shapes from hell.

But Quintana had not followed far when he had emptied his anti-aircraft belt.

Something about the transaction suddenly checked his fury, stilled it, summoned his brain into action.

For a full minute he stood unstriding, every atom of intelligence in terrible concentration.

Presently he put his left hand to his pocket, fished another clip, in his pistol, turned on his heel and walked back straight in the house.

Between the two locked in the pantry not a word had passed. Stormont still peered out between the iron bars striving to catch but a glimpse of what was going on. Eve crouched at the pantry doors, her face in her hand and listening.

Suddenly she heard Quintana's step in the kitchen. Cautiously, she turned the pantry key from inside.

Stormont heard her, and instantly came to her. At the same moment Quintana unbolted the door from the outside and tried to open it.

"Come out," he said coldly, "or it will not go well with you when my men return."

"You've got what you say is your property," replied Stormont, "what do you want now?"

"I tell you what—I want very much quick. Who was he, these men who rides with my property on your horse away? Eh? Because it was not Nick Salzar! No! Salzar Alons?"

"I can't tell you who he was," replied Stormont. "That's your affair, not ours."

"No? Ah! Ver' well, then. I shall tell you, Senior Felix! He was one of yours. I understand. It is a trap to cheat, what you call a plant! These men who rode your horse he is disguise! Yes! He also is a gendarme! Yes! You think I let a gendarme ride me? I got you where I want you now. You shall write your gendarme friend that he return to me my property, one day's time, or I send him by parcel post two nice, fresh-cut right hands, your sweetheart's and your own!" Stormont drew Eve's head close to his.

"This man is blood mad or out of his mind! I had better go out and take a chance at him before the others come back."

But the girl shook her head violently, caught him by the arm and drew him toward the mouth of the tile that emptied down his bootch supply when the Dump was raided.

But now, it appeared that the tile which protruded from the cement floor was removable.

In silence she began to unseal it, and he, seeing what she was trying to attempted to help her.

Together they lifted the heavy tile and laid it on the floor.

"You open these doors!" shouted Quintana in a paroxysm of fury. "I give you one minute. Then, by God, I kill you both!"

Eve lifted a screen of wood through which the tile had been set. Under it a black hole yawned. It was a tunnel made of three-foot aqueduct tiles, and it led straight into Star Pond, two hundred feet away.

Now, as she straightened up and then looked silently at Stormont, they heard the trample of boots in the kitchen, voices the bang of gun stocks.

"Does that drain lead into the lake?" whispered Stormont.

She nodded.

"Will you follow me, Eve?"

She pushed him aside, indicating he was to follow her.

As she slipped the hunting jacket from her, a hot color swept her face. But she dropped on both her knees, crept straight into the tile and slipped out of sight.

As she disappeared, Quintana shouted something in Portuguese, and fled at the lock.

With the smash of splintered wood in his ears, Stormont slid into the smooth tunnel.

In an instant he was shooting down a polished toboggan slide, and in another moment he was under the icy water of Star Pond.

Shocked, blinded, fighting his way to the surface, he felt his spurred boots dragging him like a ton of iron. Then to him came her helping hand.

"I can make it," he gasped.

But his clothing and boots and the icy water began to tell on him in mid-lake.

Swimming without effort beside him watching his every stroke, presently she sank a little and glided under him and a little ahead, so that his hands fell upon her shoulders.

He let them rest, so aware now that it was no burden to such a swimmer. Supple and silent as a swimming otter, the girl slipped lithely through the chilled water, which washed his body to the nostrils and benumbed his legs till he could scarcely move them.

And now, of a sudden his feet touched gravel. He stumbled forward in the shadow of an overhanging tree and saw her wading ashore, a dripping silvery shape on the shoal.

Then, as he staggered up to her breathlessly, where she was standing on the pebbled shore, he saw her join both hands, cup-shape and lift them to her lips.

And out of her mouth poured diamond, sapphire, and emerald in a dazzling stream, and among them one great, flashing gem, blazing in the starlight, the Flaming Jewel!

Like a maid of the lake she stood, white, slim, silent, the heaped gems glittering in her snowy hands. Her face framed by the curling masses of her wet hair.

Then, slowly, she turned her head to Stormont.

"These are what Quintana came for, could you put them in your pocket?" she asked.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

THIS FAMILY BOASTS THREE GOLF CHAMPS---FATHER, MOTHER, SON

Does one inherit ability as a golfer? That such is a possibility and in one case an actual fact, is pointed out by those who have watched the career of John Felix, 10 year old golf champion in the juvenile class at Topeka, Kansas.

The youngster comes by his golfing ability honestly. His father for several years was state champion of Kansas. His mother is now woman champion of Topeka.

In winning his juvenile title of champion of Topeka the youngster met W. Felix, and John Felix, Jr.

and vanquished many boys much older. He plays the 18 holes in the nineties and is constantly improving his game.

John Felix is neither tall nor athletic for his age. As a matter of fact he is just a trifle taller than the golf bag that he sports.

At present his mother is just able to nose out the youngster. In another year he expects to have surpassed her in the game. Having done that he intends to go after dad's scalp.

BRAIN SCARS

A physician who specializes in mental disorders tells us that a good many former booze fighters are coming to him with this rather mysterious complaint.

"I haven't done much drinking since prohibition went into effect. The alcohol must be entirely out of my system. Yet I notice lately that, every once in a while, I wake up in the morning feeling as if I had been on a big but the night before and had a hang-over. I would not mind it so much if I had really had the liquor.
But paying the penalty for an unnecessary quart of Old Crow is one straw too many on a dry and suffering candle's back."

This former old soak, according to the brain specialist, is a victim of the law of recurrences. To illustrate:

Were you ever poisoned by poison ivy? Probably you got it cured something out of your system only to find that it comes back, year after year,
at about the same month you originally contracted it.

Or a person subject to hay fever notices that the recurring attacks break out each year, almost to the day.
A friend of ours used to have rheumatism in his right leg. The leg was cut off by a street car. As customary, he constantly has the feeling that his lost leg is attached to his body, and he says he imagines he can move the missing member. This is because the part of his brain that used to move the leg still exists and is functioning.

Worst of all, at certain seasons, this unfortunate chap complains that he is suffering from rheumatism in the lost leg.

All this is part of the Law of Recurrences, a periodical functioning of the brain and body, following the course of the established rut.

As with poison ivy and the seven years itch and rheumatism in a certain leg, the nervous system, and especially the brain, runs in cycles. That is, when it becomes accustomed to responding a certain way at definite intervals, it continues its reactions by habit, even though the exciting cause is discontinued.

The old time chronic bar fly got his brain and general nervous system in the habit of having a periodical hangover. And now, by habit, the delicate machinery of the nervous system still stages a hang-over automatically, without any bottles in bond cause.

Time will gradually remedy this sad affliction of having a hang over without a prior compensation jug.

What kind of habits are you developing in your bodily organs, your nerves and mind? Easy to understand why repeated attempts to be cheerful, optimistic and happy and healthy soon become a matter of habit, automatic.

THE VALUE OF CO-OPERATION

Mrs. H. G. Reynolds, president of the Kentucky Federation of Woman's Clubs, in her address Monday night at the Manning Theater, said that she believed the word "cooperation" was the one most used in the American language. This may and may not be correct, but, if it is, there are few better words, and the popular use and practice of cooperation is an encouraging sign for America.

We know the value of cooperation in government, both national and state, where, if the executive and legislative bodies are not together, nothing but a hopeless tangle can result.

and where, if they are together constructive legislation and efficient administration is the outcome—unless the cooperation is in the wrong direction.

In business we have found that,
where merchants adhere to the old competitive system they never progress any farther than their petty dislikes and animosities allow, but where it they combine for the best interests of their city they bring more business to town and develop their city, or community, while enlarging their own interests.

In sports reforms it is the same way. We can complain of poor streets, of inefficient government, of mis-management in public affairs, but we know well that there is nothing to be gained by individual knocking. There is no moral or social reform too great to be effected in our city if the persons who, at heart really believe in it, could get together and decide to do away with existing wrongs, and then work earnestly and wholeheartedly in the matter.

There are too many people content only to be discontent. They say they want things changed but they take no steps to get it done. They know where vice and crookedness exist, and they know that the majority of popular sentiment does not endorse it, but they have not the courage or stamina to set at the root of the matter—or to try it, even.

THE CHAMPION

By Bertin Braley

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE is in trouble again.
His enemies thing they have got him at last.
They've thought so before, on occasions—and then They've found him on top when the crisis was past
For David has vigor, he's quick on the trigger.
He's there with the blarney, the skill and the brain;
And freely I'd wager this clever old stager
Will win and of Britain be premier again.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE isn't ever asleep.
He seems to be napping at times, but he's not.
He always is ready and willing to leap
In the thick of battle.
He lets his toes bind him with both hands behind him,
And just when they chuckle and chortle with glee,
And start celebrations and wild jubiliations,
He does a Houdini and gets away free!

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE has the pep and the punch.
He's even alert and he's always astir.
Among Europe's statesmen the best of the bunch,
Whatever the problem he's right on the job.
He thrives upon crises; his vigilant eye sees
The chance of successes in peace or in war,
And when this fight's finished—with vim undiminished
David Lloyd George will be THERE as of yore!

THE REFEREE

BY ALBERT APPLE.

Jokes

Raymond Hitchcock, come hither, says Americans have a sense of pie in the face or slapstick fun, but no real sense of humor.

He claims the old jokes go best with an audience because a joke, to an American, is like wine, has to be aged to be appreciated.

That's not the reason. Old jokes bring laughs, year after year, because a new generation is always growing up that never has heard the old gags.
The stuff that is old to grown ups is new to youth. Actors and scenery change, but life is the same old show, century after century.

Talk

Comedian Raymond Hitchcock has decided that most Americans who go to theaters have a vocabulary of only 500 words, such as yes, no, listen, radio, live, money, papa, mama, prohibition and say.

Maybe it's for the best.
Even with a vocabulary limited to 500 words most of us talk too much of the wrong kind of stuff. What would it be like if we had the whole dictionary at our tongues' tip?

Booming

A shortage of 141,252 freight cars existed October 8, reports the American Railway Association. And the shortage is growing.

Nine months ago, on January 8,
the railroad had a surplus of 646-673 idle cars.

A comparison of the figures informs you more about business conditions than you could get by reading a mile of the average financial news.
When railroads move freight on a big scale, people are buying and selling on a big scale. That makes prosperity.

Means

Sober second thought suggests that some of these stock dividends are cir-cumbers or lemons, rather than means.

A share of stock is really a mortgage on part of the physical value of a business. Divide the number of outstanding shares of stock into the dollars or physical value that the shares represent, and you have the true value of one share.

When the number of shares is doubled, the original real value of one share is cut in two. Tripled, divide by three. And so on. That's simple arithmetic. A gallon remains a gallon, whether you keep it in one jug

or divide it into quarts or pints.

Voters

In Russia only soldiers and peasants or other people who actually work with hand or brain are allowed to vote.

New orders issued to Soviet election officials, rule that the following shall not be permitted to vote.

"Persons who employ hired labor for the purposes of profit, persons who live on unearned increment, private dealers, traders and commercial agents, clergymen, monks and all employees of religious entities."

This is class government pure and simple. Among others, it bars from the polls a farmer employing one farm-hand. Still, what happens in Russia is the Russians' business, not ours.

Advice

Charles M. Schwab, the steel maker, says he doesn't take much stock in great geniuses, but the hardest struggle in the world is to be more than an average man. Think and do differently from the average, if you want to find success. Learn to do some one thing better than anyone else.

That's all right, provided, the one thing, is a profitable pursuit. World championships at making fire poker out of wax wouldn't get anyone anywhere.

THE GAME OF BRIDGE.

The most famous of experts at auction whist was a gambler on a large scale, and he also combined his card-playing with vices and other gambling.
Such is often the case. Those for whom bridge becomes the center of life are likely to acquire the gambler mind, the gambler heart and soul.
But that is not the entire story.
Bridge requires thought. It puts the brain to an exercise similar to those given by algebra and logic. It trains the memory and requires concentration. Thousands of men and women, especially in the smaller cities, are thus obtaining an activity of mind they would never otherwise know.

Good does not cease to be good because exaggeration can turn it into evil. There is scarcely a virtue that cannot by excess become a vice.

Only men who used to carry golf bags were umbrella menders.

Billy Evans Says:

Ten years ago the east was supreme in football. How things have changed.

Ten years ago the defeat of Yale by Iowa would have been regarded as a tragedy, a startling upset.

College football is a development of the east. For years the east reigned supreme on the gridiron. Not so many years ago when a football authority set out to pick an All-American team he didn't look much farther than Yale, Harvard and Princeton. To put a western player on the eleven would have been regarded in the light of a huge joke.

The 6 to 0 timing handed Yale
by Iowa a short time back didn't cause much more than a ripple of surprise in the sport world. As a matter of fact many of the experts predicted it.

How things have changed. The so-called Big Three is a thing of the past as far as superiority in football is concerned. As a matter of fact there are often more representative teams in the east than any of the trio.
While not desiring to take the least hit of credit away from Iowa, Yale is a long way from being the best eleven in the east.

During the recent world series it was my very good fortune to bump into a number of former gridiron stars who were passing up football until the actual close of the baseball season. I had a long talk with a player who ten years ago was one of the most talked about stars of the gridiron.

The argument advanced by the old star looked good to me. The western eleven are more versatile, due to the willingness of most of the coaches to experiment.

THREE KEYS TO WOMAN'S HAPPINESS

By MARIAN HALE.

"Three keys open the door which leads to women's happiness—love, domestic interest and personal achievement," says Blanche Upright, the San Francisco novelist.

"Many modern women are trying to enter with just one pass key—personal achievement, without taking into consideration the importance of the first two. So we hear much about their restlessness and discontent," she continued.

"I am convinced women will never find happiness in careers or professions if they select them as substitutes for homes, children and the normal interests of women. Women are essentially homemakers.

"Those brave women who go out to work that they may maintain or help maintain a home for those dependent on them are greatly to be admired, but those who go into business just to avoid the responsibilities of being a wife and mother are storing up unhappiness later.

Follow Wrong Trail.

"In my study of women and types I find that so many women try to find their happiness everywhere except where it is most easily found—in home life.

"They make the loss of a maid or he desire for things which they can not have material for tragedy. They are so blinded by trivialities they can not see the suffering beyond their own immediate vision, and the opportunity to help others."

Mrs. Upright has given much thought to women's problems. Her first novel, which is being dramatized and pictured this year, "The Valley of Content" was based upon the search for happiness. The novel which she is now finishing has to do with women's independence.

Her literary career began at the age of 5, when she dictated fairy tales to her nurse. At ten she produced a six-act play, and when she was nicely started in her teens she became associated with the San Francisco paper.

London Advised Her.

She took her first piece of fiction to Jack London for criticism and he told her to go ahead and be famous.

The real ambition of her life is not literary success, but a large estate on the Hudson, to which she may take the little waifs she finds in the slums and give them a chance at a real home and some real mothering.

"Of course, for my fiction, I pick my types all over," she said, "but I find much more that touches my heart among the poor than in the ordinarily comfortable circles.

"I have made it my business to look for the good in people and I have never yet been disappointed.

"I have never known a woman who did not have a beautiful side to her character, no matter what her occupation or circumstances might be, nor have I ever found a child who did not respond to kindness and understanding."

Though her home on the Hudson is still a dream she has already worked up a great acquaintance with the children of New York's East Side tenements and they are frequently entertained at her suite at the Hotel Astor and sent home happy with new clothes and toys.

Mrs. Upright herself is happily married and has a grown son.

Railroad Expenditures Stimulate Business

Ques. What has ailed business for the past two years?

Ans. Lack of nutrition.

Ques. What nourishes business?

Ans. Orders.

Ques. Whose?

Ans. Primarily, orders from transportation, mining and manufacturing enterprises.

Normally, the railroads consume nearly 50 per cent of the iron and steel products of the country. When inadequate income forces them to abandon improvements and betterments and retire from the market, business necessarily slumps.

Railroad activity is essential to good business conditions.

TAR HOLLOW PEOPLE DEFY WHOLE COUNTY

Above is a typical squatter's home in Tar Hollow. At the right is a group of its women who laugh at school laws.

Chillicothe, Oct. 24.—When a squatter's home in Tar Hollow, a few extra miles past the Columbus river, started a fight for the additional heads of county 70 miles away.

The squatters made possible the school conditions in Tar Hollow. They have never been out of the hollow in their lives, even to go to school. The village has no school district west of Columbus. The state awarded the district to Tar Hollow. Since the county and because of this Tar Hollow defies all of

One man in Tar Hollow agreed to let his six children go to school, but did so only at a long argument. On a man deserted by his husband and one of her nine children had eyes seen the inside of a school house.

Because in Tar Hollow belongs to a school district in a county 70 miles away, to get authorities cannot force these people to send their children to Ross county schools.

Tar Hollow folks squatters on the land became aware that the work of county school and health officers had been hampered some way. Since then they have fully refused either to send their children to school or to even come up their makeshift habitations.

In desperation, the matter has been put up to state officials. Some contend it may be necessary to pass special

CHANGE OF LIFE

Florida Lady Was in a Miserable Condition, But Says She Found Cardui Helpful, and Got Well.

Altus, Fla.—In explaining how she found Cardui so helpful during change of life, Mrs. Ella M. Bailey, of Route 2, this place, said:

"I became so weakened it was an effort for me to get around. I knew what was the matter, but I felt like I couldn't give up."

"I just dragged, and I certainly was nervous. I was so restless I could not sit down long—yet so weak I couldn't get about. It is a most miserable and such a helpless feeling."

"I would get depressed and out of heart."

"I began to feel, after awhile, there was no use to try to get well. This is all wrong, for it makes a person worse."

"I had heard of Cardui, and thought it might strengthen me. A neighbor had used it with good results."

"I took one bottle (of Cardui), then I saw I wasn't so nervous, so kept it up."

"Gradually the nervousness left me. I began to eat and sleep better. Was soon well, and all right. Cardui did wonders for me, and I certainly do recommend it."

Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others.

AUTUMN CALLS MANY TO QUEBEC'S GAILY COLORED MOUNTAINS

ORGANIZERS OF THE AUTUMN EXCURSION OF THE APPALACHIAN CLUB OF NEW ENGLAND TO LAURENTIAN MTS.

THE GREAT CROSS ON CALVARY HILL AT ST. JOVITE IS VISITED BY APPALACHIAN CLUB

CLUB MEMBERS ON STEPS OF GREY ROCKS INN AT ST. JOVITE, READY FOR A HIKE AND CLIMB

Autumn in the woods of eastern Canada is a delightful season and this fact influences many to postpone their vacations to September and October in order to enjoy the bracing air and wonderful colorings of the north woods. Just now the Appalachian Club, an organization of New England nature lovers, is enjoying its Autumn Excursion at St. Jovite in the Laurentian Mountains, 86 miles northwest of Montreal. Reports and pictures received from them prove that they chose wisely as to time and place. St. Jovite is a picturesque village dominated by Calvary Hill from which rises a great cross. This is the land of the Habitant whose religion is an every day devotion. He has always time to stop and kneel and say a prayer before the wayside shrines and crosses.

Two and one-half miles from the village lies pretty Lake Opimet and on a hill overlooking it is located Grey Rocks Inn, the headquarters of the Appalachian Club during a Quebec outing.

For tramping, climbing and picnicking no more attractive place could have been selected. Many points of interest are within easy radius of the inn, the chief one being Mount Tremblant, the trembling mountain of the Indians who declare that it trembles at certain hours. This is the highest peak in the Laurentian Mountains of Canada and affords excellent climbing all the year round. It can be seen from Grey Rocks and the trail between the two points is interesting, passing Lac Mercier with its unique beach and bath house in mid-lake. It also skirts Lac Tremblant, a nine-mile-long sheet of blue water. The mountain is covered with a fine growth of timber which is protected by fire-rangers who have a cabin well up its slope. As one rows or motor-boats along its base, many pretty waterfalls can be seen cascading toward the lake. They are the overflow of several small lakes that are cupped upon Mount Tremblant's slope.

Good times all around the year is Grey Rocks' program. Fishing, hunting, hiking, climbing and winter sports are among the attractions of this gateway to the 30,000-acre "Parc de la Montagne Tremblante," a provincial reserve.

FORDS REDUCED $50 ON EACH CAR

According to a statement just issued by Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit, a general reduction of $50 a car has been made in the price of Ford Model T cars and the Ford one-ton truck, effective October 17.

"The revision in prices," said Mr. Ford, "is the result of an increased volume of business which our company has enjoyed during the present year, and also, to the fact that we now own and operate many of our own resources of raw material, which enables us to continue increasing the quality of our product and at the same time keep the price so low that Ford cars are in reach of everybody."

"Our production for 1922 is already in excess of a million, which has been an important factor in bringing down costs. Our present daily output is averaging better than 5,000 cars and trucks, which means a complete Ford Car or Truck every 5 1-2 seconds of each eight-hour working day. It is an anticipation of this continued demand that price adjustments are once more being made in order to keep in effect the policy of selling Ford products at the lowest price consistent with quality."

"This reduction, which is the sixth since March 1920, brings the price of the Ford Touring car from $375, the price in effect early in 1920, to the present extremely low level of $298, which is nearly 50 per cent less. Corresponding reductions have been made on all other types."

The new prices, by types, follow: Touring, $298; roadster, $269; chassis, $235; coupe, $530; sedan, $595; truck, $330.

I have had attacks of kidney complaint when I have had to be flat on my back for days at a time. I had to put hot blankets across my back to relieve me of the awful pains. Sediment and bits of gravel caused the torture. Among my customers were people who had taken Doan's Kidney Pills with good results, so I took them with excellent results. I am glad to say they cured me. I wouldn't be without Doan's in my house for I certainly want them in case I have another attack." 60c at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. ## Solve This Puzzle

WE KNOW an old man who is worth about $40,000. He claims that he has never had a dollar given to him and that all his earnings combined are not more than his present wealth.

And yet he has not saved all he has earned in a life time. What is the answer to this puzzle?

It is all very simple. Early in life he began to save at least 25 cents out of every dollar he earned. This money was deposited in the savings department of the bank and from time to time he made investments when his funds grew large enough for that.

This plan has been working for more than 40 years. His total savings are only about $12,000. The balance of his money is interest money.

Think it over.
